

Has this happened to you? We can help!

? Our neighbors have been complaining about our fights and now we're being evicted.

What can I do?

! If you are the victim of domestic violence and receive a notice to vacate from your landlord, you may not have to move. In Washington state, both the fair housing laws and the Residential Landlord-Tenant Act (RLTA) may provide protections against evictions in this situation.

? I was the victim of domestic violence within the last 90 days and I need to get out of my lease early. Who can help me?

! The state's Residential Landlord-Tenant Act may allow you to end your lease early. See the back panel for more information on recent changes to the RLTA and where to find help. You can also contact one of the fair housing agencies listed at the right.

? My boyfriend hit me and is serving time in jail. Now no one will rent to me and my children. What are my rights?

! Under fair housing laws, a landlord cannot deny you a place to live simply because you were a victim of domestic violence. If this happens to you, contact your local fair housing agency immediately for assistance. The RLTA also provides protections to victims of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.
